“A
MOTHER IN HISTORY”

speaks her mind...

“Now maybe Lee Harvey Oswald was the assassin. But does that make him a louse? No, no! Killing does not necessarily mean badness. You find killing in some very fine homes for one reason or another. And as well all know, President Kennedy was a dying man. So I say it is possible that my son was chosen to shoot him in a mercy killing for the security of the country. And if this is true, it was a fine thing to do, and my son is a hero . . . believe me, if anybody's in their right mind, it's Marguerite Oswald.”

Farrar, Straus and Giroux

When the brilliantly perceptive writer Jean Stafford (author of The Mountain Lion, Boston Adventure), traveled to Texas to interview her unusual subject, the result was a memorable encounter, recorded in memorable prose.

In Her Own Words

Mrs. Oswald met Miss Stafford on three consecutive days, twice in her home, and on the third day, Mother's Day, the interview was completed at Lee Harvey Oswald's grave, where Mrs. Oswald insisted on taking the author. From her many statements—some startling, some contradictory, a few deeply shocking, and all of them revealing—a deeply-etched self-portrait of Mrs. Oswald emerges.

In these pages, she has portrayed herself not only as a “mother in history” but as a mother that history will remember. Not only an incredible close-up of Lee Harvey Oswald's mother . . . but a revealing insight into her influence on his behavior.

Marya Mannes, in Book Week:

“a most valuable analysis of a woman sick with a spiritual and emotional malignancy. Like a good analyst, Miss Stafford hardly speaks at all, letting the wild, interminable flow, alternately deluded and canny, outraged and cosy, spill from the woman's lips.”

Elliot Fremont-Smith in The New York Times:

[A] “shocked and shocking book . . . the whole absurd obscenity of the Dallas killing and its lunatic circus aftermath is contained in this portrait . . .”
