Rite at Dealey Plaza Marks Anniversary of Assassination

DALLAS, Nov. 22 (AP)—Mayor Erik Jonsson, speaking at a memorial service on the anniversary of the assassination of President Kennedy, called today for the living to carry on his aims.

The Mayor quoted a portion of another assassinated President's speech, Lincoln's Gettysburg Address: "It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated [here] to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced."

Mr. Jonsson spoke at Dealey Plaza only a few feet from the place where Mr. Kennedy was shot Nov. 22, 1963, by a man the Warren Commission said was Lee Harvey Oswald.

The service was sponsored by the Greater Dallas Council of Churches. In past years, the services at the site were sponsored by private organizations.

Wreaths Placed at Stone

About 300 persons attended. Several laid wreaths at the granite stone that marks the area of the shooting.

The affair was solemn under leaden skies in striking contrast to the bright, crisp day when the President was shot as he and his entourage laughed and waved to the crowds lining the street.

One woman wore a button reading "Kennedy Our Next President," a relic of the 1960 campaign. It carried the slain President's picture.

Mr. Jonsson said, "If we work and strive together in the spirit of the late President when he said, 'Ask not what your country can do for you but what you can do for your country,' then we can achieve the free society for all men to which we have so long aspired."

"Throughout this nation," the Mayor said, "thoughtful men are concerned with the problems of cities. Staggering in their magnitude and complexity, difficult and challenging as it will be to devise their solutions, surely we shall not despair nor compromise the values to which the future calls us. "It would be foolish to suppose that it will not take time to find true answers for all the complicated human problems with which we are faced today. No quick or sudden miracles will be performed, but we must never cease to try until the best of our potential has been realized." "But none knew better than President Kennedy," Mr. Johnson went on, "that we cannot look inward to our own problems alone. bilities in a divided and often confused world society, presented grave problems. So did more mature countries, suffering the after-effect of war, of ailing economies, overpopulation, barriers of caste, starvation, pestilence and a thousand more. So it was that he wrote, in a speech destined never to be delivered here:

"We in this country, in this generation, are . . . by destiny rather than choice . . . the watchmen on the walls of freedom. We ask, therefore, that we may be worthy of our power and responsibility, that we may achieve in our time and for all time the ancient vision of peace on earth, goodwill toward men. That must always be our goal — and the righteousness of our cause must always underlie our strength. For as was written long ago.

"Except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain."

"In the final analysis it remains to use as the challenge of our time to accept and implement our world leadership in building a peaceful, constructive and responsible society which recognizes fully the individual, his worth, his dignity, his rights, his needs, his duties to God, family and country, but which demands his unswerving adherence to the rule of law."

Brothers Visit Grave

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 (AP) — President Kennedy's two brothers went in the cold mist before daybreak today to his grave in Arlington National Cemetery.

At 9 A.M., a White House military aide brought a wreath from President Johnson, stood for a moment and then saluted. Six honor guards at the grave clicked their heels and saluted at the same time. Senator Edward M. Kennedy, Democrat of Massachusetts, arrived at 6:45

A.M. and stood silently for a moment at the spot where President is buried and the eternal flame flickers.

Senator Robert F. Kennedy, Democrat of New York, arrived shortly after 7 A.M. but, apparently seeing television cameras behind the grave, left quickly.

Mrs. Evelyn Lincoln, who was secretary to the late President, brought two white carnations and left them on one of the granite slabs that cover his grave.

Lieut. Col. Haywood Smith, Marine aide at the White House brought the Presidential wreath of red and white carnations and blue cornflowers. The card said "The President."

Others came in the early morning, swelling the count of visitors that has already reached 21 million. One man brought a branch of holly. One woman knelt and crossed herself.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk and his wife arrived at 10:45 and stood for a moment at the grave. Postmaster General Lawrence F. O'Brien, who worked for Mr. Kennedy in the White House, also paid tribute.

A group of men from the Special Forces at Fort Bragg, N.C., marched up in squad formation and left a wreath of green-dyed carnations in the shape of their trademark, the green beret.

President Kennedy's widow was in New York and planned, a spokesman said, to take her children to Newport, R. I., for Thanksgiving with her family. The children will mark birthdays soon. John Jr. will be 7 on Saturday; Caroline, 10, next Monday.
