National Day of Mourning

Washington

President Johnson yesterday proclaimed a national day of mourning for Senator Robert F. Kennedy and asked Americans to "walk together through this dark night of common anguish into a new dawn of healing unity."

He ordered the flag flown at half-staff at United States Government and military installations at home and abroad until after the assassinated New York Democrat is buried late Saturday afternoon at Arlington National Cemetery.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey received special permission as presiding officer in the Senate to deliver a "statement of respect and affection to the life and memory" of Kennedy.

In an emotional voice, Humphrey said after a day of eulogies on the floor that the Nation must "dispel the force of unreason and hate, extremism and violence in our midst."

At 5:01 a.m. — 17 minutes after Kennedy died in Los Angeles — White House assistant Walt W. Rostow telephoned Mr. Johnson with the news. "Mr. President," he said, "It has just been announced that Senator Kennedy has died."
