

Kennedy's Malibu Rescue

San Francisco Chronicle 7

Thurs., June 6, 1968

Los Angeles.

Before Senator Robert Kennedy's triumph was assured in Tuesday's California primary, reporters noted the Senator had a slight bruise over his right eye.

Aides explained that earlier in the day one of the Kennedy sons had been caught in heavy surf and an undertow while swimming at Malibu beach and Senator Kennedy swam to his rescue.

While saving his son's life

Kennedy received the bruise. Some hours later the Senator was shot and critically wounded in the head.
