20-YEAR TERM ASKED IN BEN BARKA AFFAIR

Special to The New York Times

Special to The New York Times

PARIS, May 30—A French prosecutor asked today that a 20-year prison sentence be imposed on Lieut. Col. Ahmed Dlimi, chief of the Moroccan security police, for his part in the abduction of Mehdi Ben Barka, the Moroccan Opposition leader.

Mr. Ben Barka was kidnapped here in October, 1965. He has not been seen since and is believed dead.

Colonel Dlimi surrendered to the French police last October as the six-week trial of the alleged Ben Barka abductors was in its last day. He said he had come to clear himself of charges of complicity.

The colonel's arrival forced a suspension of the trial. A new one opened six weeks ago.

In his six-and-a-half-hour summary today, the state prosecutor, Henry Toubas, directly charged Colonel Dlimi and Gen. Mokammed - Oufkir, Moroccan Interior Minister, with having plained, executed and financed the plot.

While there is only circumstantial evidence against Colonel Dlimi, it is up to him under French law to prove his innocence. The prosecutor appeared to consider that he had failed to do so.