

3/17- In pointing out that I had been able to anticipate what Nixon was going to say before he said it, I failed to make the key point: if I can do this as the result of a superficial analysis made while I was engaged in other pursuits, my God! how easy he must be for other countries, esp. the research and intelligence units of the foreign offices and the intelligence services themselves. I don't think that during my adult years there has been a President as easy to figure. Fortunately, nobody, despite the prevailing political paranoia, has any evil intention toward us.^H

MAR 17 1972