

HW:

I'm wondering if the Evans and Novak column you saw on Colson's threat to sue TIME carried the footnote, as per the attached.

Seems here that Colson's crowd would think twice about opening the whole case up in court again -- unless they could have even better assurances than they seem to with Sirica that nothing really would be gone into to any depth. It seems likely they could not count on attorneys for Time, Inc., to observe the same restraints so carefully respected by those for the Watergate defendants.
