

HW: Re: Pore Hennery.

Your memos of 24 and 25Jan73 about now is the time for Henry to leave, were written well before the attached appeared. It carries the ring of a bridge being burned. His nasty crack about Harvard being unable to make up its mind is not the sort of thing to make him very welcome.

We certainly agree this is the time to leave, that there's no comparable future for him under Nixon. It seems highly unlikely that he himself doesn't realize this. Therefore we are inclined to suspect that Henry has just learned that one doesn't resign from the mob, that he's going to have to stick around to take the blame for anything bad that happens. Sure he can write a book. How long would he live? If it's any good.
