

Dear Js, The trip from which I returned after midnight was by far the toughest ever because of the totality of corruption and depravity I confronted from the two most unprincipled men I have ever in my life met on their turf, with virtual 100% unfriendlies to enemies among officials and because of the scope of what had to be done in too little time they shortened by rottenness and deliberateness. However, I also can't imagine a more successful one. I spent nights drawing on a local source with great success but it means drinking until 2 a.m. and after without getting drunk and then working long, lunchless days. None of this was for writing, none deliberately for the trial, all for the coming hearing. Some will be useful in the trial also but I can't talk about any of it. However, I am very tired and I can't stop to rest because there is too much to do, beginning with extensive notes and including preparing for what can be an even nastier time at the hearing. The great boon was that I was working with Lesar alone. He was great in every way. Best regards, HW 10/4/74 OCT 7 1974
