

The EEG was normal and Lil appears to be pretty much as she was. She see's the neurologist again this coming Friday. She is presently visiting with my mother in Wilmington. She returns tomorrow night. She can be very self-contained about such matters and I've learned not to push her in this attitude. However, I know it has been on her mind because I learned from our friend Lida yesterday that Lil had discussed this and her concern over it with her. Lida comes from time to time to help her and did yesterday, knowing Lil was away, so she'd have no house work to do on her return. She had done this the first full day of the amnesia and Lil later told her of having no recollection of it. For about a week Lil complained about a bad headache daily. This appears to have ceased with the report on the EEG, so that is encouraging, I think indicating the origin was tension and concern. ...I'm pretty good. You ought to see the size of green locust cut to stove length I've been bringing up to the house to split - up to almost a foot and a half. Having a winter's supply on hand is getting close to reality...Heard from Dave yesterday. He's gotten a furnace-type wood -burning stove or furnace and it works well. ... Hope ypu are well and happy.
