

Before undertaking his own and successful fraud following it on WTOP radio, Mark Evans was Arthur Godfrey's foil on that station and Godfrey's ~~show~~ ^{show}. Evans then used his real name, Austad. (WOLF footnote: there was a real "Mark Evans, a friend of ours, who did their all-night longhair show for American Airlines, who had to change his name from Mark Evans!) The successor-to-Godfrey show, fake Mark Evans' "Housewife's Protective League", was so phoney it apparently was a considerable asset to food broker Kluge, who took Wustad/^{Evans} in tow and with him when he organized Metroemdia. Under the name by which he is never known, Austad, this right extremist True Believer signed these rotten dirty ads against the liberals in the last campaign. I have a notion that it will come out that the Creeps paid for those ads, too. If I remember correctly, the GOP credited with running that operation could not or did not account for his funds. These were the last Congressional elections, before the real CREEP was aborted into life, I think. Thus on last night's special of the WG, on the station where Evans as Metro v.p. is officed, the incredible Martin Abend, who knew nothing and was unbelievable on the air, even defending the WG 7, was a predictable sign of his influence on the show. He is that kind of guy. HW 4/26/73
