Raid Has 'Mission Impossible' Ring

By JEREMY OLEARY

San-San Writer

The raid against the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee was carried out with all the gadgetry and imagination of television's "Mission Impossible."

What is incredible is the belligerence that led to the arrest of the suspected mastermind.

When arrested Saturday morning, police found the suspect in the top floor office of the DNC headquarters, the camera that fits in a watch pocket. Police seized 36 rolls of film, but the film had not been exposed, and police deduced that the suspects had not had time to photograph any documents.

Reporters learned that the cameras had been replaced with cameras of the sort used to attack photographic equipment firms or copying instruments. One camera also contained a timer and a decision to sacrifice this evidence to cover their tracks.

With integrity intact, the agents were able to range far and wide in their search for evidence of the plot.

Agents of the FBI, however, before discovery of the break-in.

A strong indicator of a sixth participant came when police found a roll of tape in one of the suspect's rooms on the second floor, similar to the file used to keep locks open when the drop mechanism was removed.

A such man, sources said, would have been at the Watergate last month when the drop mechanism was removed.

On October 12, he paid a visit to his room and had been a frequent visitor to his room since his arrival.
