DWIGHT L. CHAPIN, who is resigning as appointments secretary to President Nixon, will join United Air Lines as director of market planning, the airline announced yesterday.

Chapin will be based in Chicago. He will "play a creative part in developing the dynamic market programs needed to give us the edge in today's highly competitive market," Rob Mangold, a UAL vice president, said.

The White House on Monday confirmed reports that Chapin was resigning to accept an important business post, but it denied reports that the 32-year-old assistant to the President was leaving because of any connection with political espionage activity during the campaign.
