For the first time in his career, Re- publican National Chairman George Bush is seriously considering a rece for governor of Texas in the 1974 Texas election. Bush is under growing pressure from such old-line Republican power in Texas as former national commity. Moreover, some top Connally. Moreover, some top Connally-style Democrats have let it be known that if Bush runs for governor they will foi- low Connally into the Republican party. But perhaps more important than these pressures on Bush is the fact, thown to political intimates, that the Washington scene as viewed from GOP headquarters holds few charms for him. He feels each new Watergate revelation further damages his party even though the scandal was caused not by traditional party regulars but by what one party leader calls the White House "carpetbaggers." Bush could easily beat conservative Republican Henry (Hank) Grover in the primary and might go into the election as a 50-50 even shot for governor, far better odds than he faced in his two losing attempts for the senate. ••• A fund-raising tea party in the attractive Georgetown house of Mrs. Dean G. Acheson should raise several thousand dollars for the infant Committee for a Democratic Majority (CDM), a political brainchild of Democratic Operative Ben. J. Wattenberg. Wattenberg, an intellectual out of Lyndon Johnson's White House and co-author of the bestselling "The Real Majority" (with Richard Scammon), has arranged for Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey and Henry M. Jackson to be honor guests at the May 21, $50-ahead party, with 250 invitations ready for mailing. The symbolism of the Acheson house is stark. A key principle behind CDM is to keep the U.S. strong and active as a world power and to battle the new isolationism now rising on the Democratic for Harry S. Truman who molded the Democratic Party's whole postwar foreign policy, is the ideal place to advertive is the similar foreign polices of the CDM.
