Convicted Watergate burglar, Frank Sturgis says he plotted to kill Fidel Castro in 1960 while working with the CIA, but dropped the plan after failing to get top U.S. officials' go-ahead from Washington, the New York Court of Appeals decided yesterday.

"They wouldn't give me the green light. They would never have given me the green light," he said. "I had no authority."

He was asked whether he had any say in the plan through the U.S. Embassy in Cuba and added: "Whether this top approval would have come from the top level in Washington or the lower level, I don't know."

Sturgis—who served as a counter-intelligence officer during his duty in the U.S. intelligence community at the CIA in 1957 at the urging of Cuban exiles in Miami—then reported Castro had been "the best CIA agent I ever worked with."

against Fulgencio Batista.

The News said Sturgis worked as a gun-runner for Castro and within a period of months was recruited for intelligence work by Park F. Woolam, then in charge of the U.S. Consulate in Cuba.

After Castro rose to power, Sturgis became vice-chairman and chief of the Cuban Air Force. He said Woolam told him to go to Havana and make contact with CIA agents at the American Embassy.

At the agent's direction, he said, "I recruited everyone I could, Americans and Cubans, to be undercover agents."

The News said a friend of Sturgis, May German Gonzales, confirmed that the CIA asked Sturgis to participate in assassination plots in Cuba and elsewhere.

But Sturgis would comment only on the abortive plot in 1960. He said he first discussed it with CIA contacts in February of that year.

"I was making reports on all the Communist activity in the military," Sturgis told the News. "I suggested that this would be a good time to assassinate Fidel. I said I would organize it and follow it through."

Sturgis said he suggested setting up a conference with top military and government leaders attending. "I was going to station gunners on the roofs, set up a crossfire. I would have wiped out Fidel, his brother Raul and all the top military commanders in 30 seconds," he said.

"I asked my contact in the Embassy to get a green light on this," he added, but was abandoned.

The News said other intelligence sources said the CIA later approved and bankrolled other plots to wipe out Castro, with Mafia dons and others playing prominent parts in those conspiracies.
