

Jim, after reading the Times 10-6-73 story Florida Official Fails to Find Proof of Hotel Bugging, which includes an account of Cox talking Gerstein into doing nothing when Gerstein thought he had a local case and indicates the importance of the seized phonebooks of the Cubans, I think it is possible to infer more than the usual from Cox's refusal to let me have that evidence when it is part of official court records and not subject to withholding. Obviously, mine included investigative interests, and the Gerstein use is one of those I had in mind and not only because of the Madrigal angle, which was reported earlier. Maybe we should be looking for Sedan Chair III? Maybe also Gerstein has a copy of the phonebooks and would not mind supplying? HW 10/10/73
