particular we should keep in mind. If dean felt as represented, the the obvious thing to do was to arrange for their quiet disappearance. This would have been simple enough. But no, he involved many, including the chief Cestapo. Who destroyed, unseen!? to One obvious possibility is that he wanted this to get out of his hands and known. He had no reason to assume tray would read, would destroy, would be silent. Every reason opposite this. The questions this thing raises about Hunt need no elaboration. If he could do these things, he alone understands truth and real patriotism. Need one add and what true patriotism requires? If it may mean nothing, it can't be ignored. HW 4/27/73