Post 4/19/73

Secret Testimony on Delivery of Cash

By Jack Anderson

Secret grand jury testimony reveals that H. R. Haldeman, the White House major domo, ordered $350,000 in $20, $50 and $100 bills locked in a White House safe during the 1972 campaign.

After the election, the cash was delivered surreptitiously to a campaign aide, with Haldeman's approval, in an apparent violation of the new campaign disclosure law.

This is the sworn testimony of Haldeman's loyal former assistant, Gordon Strachan, who picked up the money the day before the disclosure law went into effect. He received it from Hugh Sloan, the campaign treasurer, but returned Re-Elect the President conit to Fred LaRue, a campaign duct its business in Mr. Laaide, at his Watergate apart-Rue's apartment?" demanded liver it to him at his home, ment.

It took Strachan 45 minutes, he testified, to count all the a matter of courtesy. He's a cash. Yet no receipt was senior official. He asked me to asked, and none was given. He drop it by after work . . ." quoted LaRue as saying merely: "I'll take care of this."

be used, explained Strachan, for polling. He acknowledged that the President's campaign committee was already con- foreman. ducting "a very, very extensive polling operation." Yet $350,000 was taken away from the committee and stashed in dangerous for a person to be more polling."

LaRue and give him the been much easier and handier zer, an assistant U.S. attorney.

"I decided that myself," said Strachan.

Haldeman's Role

"Did you discuss this incident with anybody afterwards?" pressed Glanzer.

"Yes, I told Mr. Haldeman afterwards that I had given the money to Mr. LaRue."

"What did he say to you?" "Fine," Strachan quoted Haldeman as saying.

the prosecutor.

"No," said Strachan. "It was

"Do you have any idea why Mr. LaRue asked you to rethe treasurer or whatever Mr. The money was supposed to turn this money to his apartment, where actually could just walk across 17th sits for seven months. Then Street?" asked the grand jury

"No, I do not," said the witness.

"I mean, I find it somewhat case we needed to get even money in Washington in the to give it back to you since I evening . . ." said the fore-"Who told you to go to Mr. man, "when it would have Mr. LaRue." Street."

> "I agree, and I was nervous doing it, but I did it," shrugged Strachan.

> "Did it occur to you at the time," broke in another juror, "that it was not the proper way to do it?"

"Well, 'proper' is notstammered Strachan.

"Is 'proper' an obsolete word these days?" snapped the juror.

"No." said Strachan. "Whether it was proper or im-"Does the . . . Committee to proper, I was asked to return the money. I returned the pressed the prosecutor. money, and he asked me to deand I did that."

Incredulous Juror

The foreman seemed incredulous. "I'm still puzzled," he said. "You get the money from Sloan's position was in the committee . . . and the money Mr. Haldeman decides it has to go back to the committee. You call Mr. LaRue—you don't call Mr. Sloan and say 'Hugh, seven months ago you the White House, he said, "in carrying this amount of haven't used any of it; I'd like gave me this $350,000 and we chan, "I admire very much."

got it from you,' but you call

First Strachan said it was money?" asked Seymour Glan- just to walk across 17th because Sloan had left the committee. When asked why he didn't return it to his successor, he said: "I honestly don't know."

> Then Glanzer resumed the questioning. "Have you talked to Mr. Haldeman in the last couple of weeks?" he asked.

"Yes I have," replied Stra-

"About your appearance before the grand jury?"

"Yes I have."

"What did you say to him and what did he say to you,"

"He told me," replied Strachan, "to tell the absolute truth and to not worry about; any political consequences. And those are my orders . . .

"Is there any reason," demanded Glanzer, "why Mr. Haldeman would have to urge you to tell the truth?"

"No, there's no reason," said Strachan, "except it's a matter of real concern, the political damage that has resulted from this."

The handsome Strachan had one final word about Haldeman. "He's a man," said Stra-

© 1973, United Feature Syndicate