Convicted Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt has suffered an apparent stroke that has left one of his legs partially paralyzed, according to his literary egent Donald MacCampbell. MacCampbell said yesterday that he learned of the liness when he visited fluid recently at the federal prison in Danbury, Conn. MacCampbell said Hunt told him that he believes the stroke was brought on by a fight he had in June with a celimate in the District of Columbta juil.

Hunt's lawyer described him at the time as being "very upset" from a "very fraumetic - xoerience" and we was dransie ted immediately to the Arlington County jail.

-According 5 MacCamps bell, Hunt has been "deteriorating rapidly - both physically and psychologically."

"He told me he won't last two years in prison," said MacCampbell, "He looks like an old man. He was wet with perspiration. He was in such bad shape that he couldn't even draft a letter. I had to do if for him." He added, "I don't know what kind of treatment he is getting from the prison dectors. He told me that they can't treat his ulcers because that medicine conflicts with his high-blood pressure and they can't treat his high-blood pressure because that conflicts with his ulcers."

The strake, MacCampbell said, has left Hunt with a lass of feeling in his left log

The prisan's chief chies sian. Dr. David Comer, redused to discuss Huni's medical problems.

"It's a privilaged relationship and considential," he said. "If Mr. Hunt wants to discuss it with anyone, that's up to him, but I regard it as a violation of medical ethics to say what he has or doesn't have."

Dr. Robert Brutsche, medical director for the Bureau of Prisons, confirmed that a medical examination of Hunt at Danbury showed that Hunt, has symptoms "consistent with a stroke but, not necessarily indicative of one."

After Hunt complained to doctors at Darbury of his symptoms, they, diagnosed weatness in the left leg and "physical symptoms ... that could be due to a stroke or something else."

There is "no visible incapacitation," Brutsche said, Hunt, who is provisionally committed to Danbury while awaiting permanent sentencing, is hoping that his physical condition may be taken into consideration by Chief Judge John J Strice of U.S District Court, MacCampbell said.

Until his health began to fail, MacCampbell said Hum had been makimnotes for a new book. He writes in longhand because he is not allowed to have a typewriter.

"He has set some sort of publishing record," says Mag-Campbell. "He will sood have 17 books on sale ha bookstores at the same time."
