THE FAST TRACK

The Students' International Meditation Society, which usually crows about famous people who have found serenity through transcendental meditation, is under strict orders from one aficionado, E. Howard Hunt, to keep his interest secret . . . When Bobby Baker was released on parole two years ago he headed right over to Duke Zeibert's for a toast, and the L Street restaurant is still hosting the convicted high and mighty. In for lunch recently, after months of prison fare, was Herbert Kalmbach, accompanied by his lawyer; they were followed by John Mitchell and his lawyer. "What is this," groused one regular, "a halfway house?" . . . Jeb Stuart Magruder, meanwhile, was up the street, shaking hands and lunching at the Sans Souci . . . Friends say bachelor Sen. John Tunney (D-Cal.) is escorting more and more women who look as though they have a dormitory curfew. At one Washington party, Tunney's date, when asked how she spent her days, replied, "I go to school." Then there is the matter of how he keeps in shape: 40-year-old Tunney took an aisle seat on a recent trip
