Report of Executions In Chile

London

Amnesty International said yesterday the Chilean military junta has executed thousands of civilians since taking power a year ago and there are few signs of a let-up.

"The death roll of victims is unprecedented in recent Latin American history and there is little indication that the situation is improving or that a return to normality is intended," the organization said.

The special 79-page report said that anywhere between an estimated 5000 to 30,000 persons are believed to have been killed in Chile since the Sept. 11, 1974, coup that toppled the government of Salvador Allende. The report said that between 6000 and 10,000 prisoners are still being held without trial.

"Though official executions are no longer announced, disappearances continue," the report said.
