THE HARRIS SURVEY

66% of Public Feels JFK Death Was Part of Plot

By LOUIS HARRIS

For the first time since the assassination of President Kennedy in 1963, a sizable majority of the American people (66 percent) believes the shooting was not the work of one man but was part of a broader plot.

Within the past 60 days public confidence in the Warren Commission report has been pared nearly by half. Seven out of every 10 Americans are convinced there are still many "important unanswered questions."

A major contributor to this swelling doubt is the investigation into the assassination by the New Orleans district attorney. Jim Garrison. Nearly two out of three people say they have been following the events. Among these there is an even division of opinion on the merits of the Garrison inquiry: 45 percent believe it will shed new light on the assassination, while 46 percent think not much will come of it.

One American in four has been converted to a belief in the conspiracy theory alleged by the New Orleans inquiry. One in three of the less well educated and one in five of the better educated have changed their minds. Since last September the Harris Survey has asked carefully drawn cross sections of the public:

QUESTION: "Do you feel the assassination of President John F. Kennedy was the work of one man, or do you feel it was part of a broader plot or conspiracy?"

With the rise in belief the assassination was part of a broader conspiracy, conviction that the Warren Commission told the full story has dropped sharply:
