Even without the major dailies, it is now well documented by television and rump weeklies such as the Berkeley Barb that Jess Unruh is betting Bobby Kennedy will run for president this year.

That's certainly an odd enough thought, but odder still is the rumor now current that Bobby will enter the race after New Orleans district attorney Jim Garrison tells all when the Clay Shaw trial begins in two months.

One important Democrat in San Francisco believes Garrison's evidence will either force President Johnson from the race or so embarrass him that his candidacy will be a sham. This local man claims privately to have seen enough of Garrison's much-promised, but little-revealed information to be convinced of the veracity of Garrison's hints about complicity in the Kennedy assassination.

If all this happens, the rumor goes, Sen. Eugene McCarthy will probably bow out of the race in favor of his little friend with the incredible hair and the multitude of clansmen.
