My dear Penn,

You may be sad about the recent event in Mass. I am not.

If you want to save the country and make a lot of money, a man with your imagination and writing flair could do it with the title of "Clay Feet," "Fallen Idol" or "The Last Kennedy," or even "The Three Kennedys." You are already behind on the job, however, as a man should be on hand now.

Teddy is without J's charm and B's toughness and by his own statement I believe he has written his political obituary, which reminds me of another title, "The Strange Weekend near Hyannis Port."

There is no chance on the K side. They will have their own for these books and articles, on old Joe's money, and it will be a closed corporation.

The above is only a suggestion since you love to write and write well when you do your best. As I say, it should save or help save the Republic, and a good book should make a lot of money. The truth, if it can be found, should come out. It is barely possible an investigation would not make a book worthwhile but from here, at the present, there seems to be a wonderful plot and setting.

Sincerely,

A. R. Stout
