

KQED-TV Auction Gets Martha

Martha Mitchell, the outspoken wife of Attorney General John Mitchell, has agreed to have luncheon at her Watergate East apartment in Washington with the highest bidder at the KQED-TV Auction. (The auction opens May 22.)

MRS. JOHN MITCHELL

An offer of lunch

Donating herself to the San Francisco auction block is just one of the many activities occupying Mrs. Mitchell in recent days.

According to the Washington Post, Mrs. Mitchell said Thursday that she wants to visit college campuses and talk to students about drug abuse.

"I want to get close to the youth of today," she was quoted as saying. One

Washington college youth told her, "Mrs. Mitchell, you can't do that. You might be killed."

She reportedly replied, "If God wants to use me, with a message for the youth of today, I want to do it."

—V.W.