McCarthy Hints Readiness To Lead a 3d Party in '72

By R. W. APPLE Jr. Special to The New York Times

BLOOMINGTON, Minn., May Riegle Jr., Republican of Mich 23—Former Senator Eugene J. McCarthy ridiculed several of the leaders of the Democratic party in a major speech today and suggested that he might be ready to lead a third party in the 1972 Presidential campaign.

Special to The New York Times

Riegle Jr., Republican of Mich gan, and Paul N. McCloskey Ji Republican of California, M Lowenstein, and John Kerr who led the Vietnam veteran protest in Washington la month.

But it was Mr. McCarthy back on his home ground, with the senator Eugene J. Republican of Mich gan, and Paul N. McCloskey Ji Republican of California, M Lowenstein, and John Kerr who led the Vietnam veteran protest in Washington la but it was Mr. McCarthy back on his home ground, with the senator Eugene J. Republican of California, M Lowenstein, and John Kerr who led the Vietnam veteran protest in Washington la but it was Mr. McCarthy back on his home ground, with the senator in the senator in Washington la but it was Mr. McCarthy back on his home ground, with the senator in the senator in Washington la but it was Mr. McCarthy back on his home ground, with the senator in Washington la but it was Mr. McCarthy back on his home ground.

Indochina by arguing that Congressionally mandated withdrawal from Vietnam might well be counterproductive. It would invite chaos in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, he said, and constitute an abdication of responsibility.

"The answer of the war in Without mentioning the names, but couching his remarks in such a way that it was obvious whom he meant, where was obvious whom he meant, where the marks in such a way that it was obvious whom he meant, was obvious whom he meant, and constitute an abdication of responsibility.

"The answer of the war in Number of the war in names, but couching his remarks in such a way that it was obvious whom he meant, was obvious whom he meant, and constitute an abdication of responsibility.

be ready to lead a third party in the 1972 Presidential campaign.

Mr. McCarthy told a throng of more than 25,000 in the jammed Metropolitan Sports Center just south of the twin cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul that he hoped insurgents in both parties would succeed in nominating candidates committed to ending the war, reforming American politics and re-ordering priorities.

"If we cannot," he added as the crowd came to its feet and cheered, "then let us have a new party and a new policy and a true America."

Mr. McCarthy told a throng back on his home ground, who stirred the audience most. His speech was laced wit waspish obserations on Demicratic and Republican policic and Democratic officials. He dismissed President Nis on's Vietnamization policy a plan "to change the color of the corpses." American politicians who have been urgin truly frèe elections in Sout Vietnam, he said, "should hav been in Chicago for the convention in 1968." The Presidency, he said, "must not be looked upon as a politician' Mount Everest, to be scaled be cause it is there."

Without mentioning the marks in such a way that it drawal from Vietnam might and constitute an abdication of responsibility.

"The answer is that we should negotiate now," the in 1968 on the grounds that my former Senator said. "We should work for a political settlement."

Third Polly in Series. should work for a political settlement."

Third Rally in Series
Mr. McCarthy, who unsuccessfully sought the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1968, was the main speaker at the third in a series of nonpartisan "dump Nixon" rallies organized by antiwar groups around the country with the help of former Representative Allard K. Lowenstein, Democrat of Nassau.

Today's crowd was far bigger than those at Providence, R. I., on April 18 and at Indian apolis yesterday. Although young people again dominated who says he didn't present his views on Vietnam because President Johnson wouldn't let him do it."

Senator Robert Kennedy, who was also opposed to our militative present day a quasi-hawk, in support of Hubert H. Humphrey, and then still later, respectively committed against the war. That takes versatility."

Mr. Humphrey—"There is one candidate who says he didn't present his views on Vietnam because President Johnson wouldn't let him do it."

dump Nixon" rallies organized by antiwar groups around the country with the help of former Representative Allard K. Lowenstein, Democrat of Nassau. Today's crowd was far bigger than those at Providence, R. I., on April 18 and at Indianapolis yesterday. Although young people again dominated the scene, a scattering of adults, including some labor officials, were on hand here officials, were on hand here filled, as were the hallways and the floor.

For the first time, the organizers managed to attract a few prominent Republicans. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Peavey Heffelfinger, who are leading party contributors. Mrs. Heffelfinger is a former Republican National Committeewoman.

In an interview, Mr. Lowenstein expressed irritation that Mr. McCarthy had talked about a third party, adding: "I want us to elect a new President not start another protest movement." He said that rallies this summer in Oregon, California and Ohio were in the planning stage, and that arrangements for a major event at Mineola, L.I., on June 13 were nearly complete.

Among the other speakers two political settlement."

appeared within a lew ways are the Nixon inauguration as the Nixon inauguration as the Nasau. That takes versatility."

Mr. Humphrey—"There is one candidate who says he didn't present his views on Vietnam because President his views on Vietnam and Unit."

Senator Edmund S. Muskle—"Another says that he was privately against the war in 1968, but said publicly that he supported it. That's principle."

Former Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara—"He told us that we could have enough law butter. What a wonderful way to stir moral indignation." Discussing the McGovern-Hatfield resolution, which would force withdrawal of American troops were ally for withdrawal by March of 1969."

But then he criticized the resolution, arguing that the United States would have no influence on the political situation in Indochina