

President Nixon, seeking to avoid another Congressional uproar over one of his appointments in this election year, has named a successor to the late J. Edgar Hoover on an acting basis until after November 7th. No Senate confirmation is needed on the appointment