With the Vietnam cease-fire initialed, Harvard's department of government wants to know whether Henry A. Kissinger intends to return to its faculty as a professor. Dr. Kissinger took a leave of absence from Harvard in January, 1969, to become President Nixon's national security adviser. Now the government department plans to meet Feb. 5 to decide whether to replace Dr. Kissinger or prepare for his return. "We have not heard anything from him," said

James Q. Wilson, head of the department. But there are apparently no plans to press the Presidential adviser for a declaration of intent. "He knows when we meet," said Mr. Wilson.
