

MITCHELL'S PAY SET
AT $60,000 A YEAR

WASHINGTON, June 13 (AP) — Former Attorney General John N. Mitchell is earning $60,000 a year as director of President Nixon's re-election effort, the campaign committee says.

Fifty-seven other staff workers of the Committee to Re-elect the President and its finance affiliate have take-home pay of more than $1,000 a month, according to campaign committee records filed with the Government. A brother of the President is among them. Records listing salaries paid in May were among those filed Saturday by the Nixon group in accordance with the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971.

Mr. Mitchell, who resigned as Attorney General to head the re-election effort, was paid $5,376 in May, after taxes. A committee spokesman said at first that all the May figures represented one month's salary. Later, however, he said that Mr. Mitchell's was for more than a month's work and that the campaign director was being paid at the rate of $60,000 a year.

Edward C. Nixon of Lynwood, Wash., the President's brother, got $1,807 in May as "director-citizens."
