Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, June 22-An organization made up of Cuban veterans who served in the United States Army after participating in the Bay of Pigs invasion in 1961 was reported by Cuban sources today to have been involved in last Saturday's raid on the Democratic National Committee headquarters.

The organization, believed to be composed of scores of 800 Cubans trained at Fort Jackson, S. C., in 1963, is known by its Spanish name of Ex-Combatientes Cubanos de Fort Jackson.

According to Cuban sources, a number of the veterans, enlisting the aid of other Cuban refugees, met several times in Miami with American friends from Washington and agreed on direct action to combat what they viewed as left-wing causes in the United States.

The group and its associates are said by Cuban sources in Miami to have had a role in four incidents here since then, beginning in early May. But it is not known whether the Combatientes decided alone on specific actions or in response to requests by others.

The Miami sources said that Angel Ferrer, president of the Combatientes, and Humberto Lopes, a member, were in Washington, staying at the Watergate Hotel, at the time allowed by Judge James A. of the alleged attempt to install Belson to post 10 per cent of secret listening devices at the the bail as bond with the court. Cuban sources said that two of those detained were or had been members of the Combatientes. Mr. Ferrer and Mr. Lopes could not be found in Miami today. Four persons are being sought for questioning by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Washington police.

It remained at $50,000 for Eugenio R. Martinez, a notary public and an employe of Mr. Marker, and Virgilio R. Gonzales, a locksmith. Cuban sources said that these two men appeared to have had links with the combatants.

Judge Belson reserved his decision on letting Mr. Gonzales post the 10 per cent bond until it could be ascertained whether or he worked as reported by police.

Among other developments the case today were the following:
