

[Excerpt.] Herbert Klein ... who is Mr. Nixon's communications director, predicted [today in Sacramento] the indictments of seven men, including two former White House aides, in connection with the break-in of Democratic party headquarters in Washington, won't harm Mr. Nixon's re-election chances. He said, "It's completely clear that the President had no role in it. I think people are going to vote for the President, not someone clear down the line who was stupid enough to do that."
