Magazine Says Nixon Aide Admits Disruption Effort 10/30/12 By Carl Bernstein and Pob Words WATERGATE From A1 uthorized to

and Bob Woodward

Washington Post Staff Writers

Time magazine reported yesterday that Dwight L. Chapin, President Nixon's appointments secretary, has "admitted to FBI agents that he had hired" California attorney Donald H. Segretti to disrupt Democratic political cam-

In its latest edition, Time ays: "Chapin had also told the FBI that Segretti's payment was set by Nixon's personal attorney, California lawyer Herbert Kalmbach."

In addition, Time reported that Justice Department sources say that "Kalmbach, that the money he paid Segretti came from cash kept by the Committee for the Reelection of the President in the office of its finance chairman, Maurice H. Stans."

man, Maurice H. Stans."
On Oct. 15, The Washington
Post reported that Lawrence Young, 32, another California attorney, had said in a sworn statement that Segretti told him that "Dwight Chapin was a person I reported to in Washington."

Chapin at that time said through the White House press office that the story "is based on hearsay and is funda-mentally inaccurate."

Time and The Post have previously reported that Kalmbach paid Segretti for his work, and The New York Times has said Segretti made at least six telephone calls to the White House and one to Chapin's home since March.

Time's account also said "no hard evidence could be developed to support a charge by The Washington Post that H. R. Haldeman, the White House chief of staff, was one of those with control over a fund that paid for spying and disrup-

The Post, citing accounts of grand jury testimony and in-formation from federal investigators, reported Wednesday that Haldeman was one of five high-ranking presidential associates authorized to approve payments from the fund.

The Post article said Hugh W. Sloan Jr., the former treasurer of the Nixon committee, See WATERGATE, A10, Col. 1 WATERGATE, From A1 reportedly had named Haldeman in testimony before the grand jury investigating the Watergate bugging.

The next day Sloan's attor-ey denied "unequivocally" that Sloan had named Halde-

Post reporters then asked Sloan if Haldeman was indeed among those authorized to approve payments from the fund even if he did not tell that to the grand jury. Sloan declined to answer, but said, "Our denial is strictly limited" to the question of whether he named Haldeman to the grand jury and investigators.

The alleged Haldmen involve ment yesterday in separate to a special fund that has often been called a "secret fund" by the news media.

"In fact, I deny that there is any secret fund," Agnew said.

In August, the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, cited the impartial investigator to look into this matter ad give the people all the facts before as a possible violation of the poople are reperence to a special fund that has often been called a "secret fund" by the news media.

"In fact, I deny that there is any secret fund," Agnew said.

In August, the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, cited the impartial investigator to look into this matter ad give the people all the facts before as a possible violation of the properties.

The Post reporters then election day?" law because it was not propwent back to their federal sources and were told that The Post story was incorrect in identifying Sloan's grand jury testimony as a source of intestimony as a source of information on Haldeman's link to the fund.

However, these same sources, who have provided detailed information on the Watergate investigation, confirmed once more that Haldeman was auconfirmed thorized to make payments prehensible," man to the grand jury or any federal investigators.

Post reporters then asked

George McGovern and Vice President Agnew spoke about the alleged Haldmen involve-President Agnew spoke about man before the grand jury the alleged Haldmen involve- and because of the reference people all the facts before election day?"

One source went so far as to say, "This is a Haledman operation," and that Haldeman had "insulated" himself, dealing with the fund through an intermediary.

I connecting Haldeman with the fund was "a contrived story constructed out of two untruths attempting to tie this to the President."

Agnew said the Haldeman termediary.

termediary story was in question because Meanwhile, both Sen. Sloan's attorney had denied George McGovern and Vice that his client named Halde-President Agrees space than the first that his client named Halde-as a possible violation of the