New Report in Watergate
Bugging Case

Washington

President Nixon's campaign organization received at least $30,000 through a secret bank account in Luxembourg last spring, the House Bank-tee said yesterday in a new report on the Water-gate bugging case.

The staff study, released by committee chairman Wright Patman (Dem.-Tex.), said "it is reasonable to assume that the total amount (from foreign bank accounts) is substantially higher."

In a response to the report, a spokesman for the Com-mittee for the Re-election of the President termed it a "dishonest collection of innu-endo and fourth-hand hear-say" and "nothing more than an eleventh-hour at-tempt to save Mr. Patman's candidate for President from what may be one of the worst defeats in American political history."

Committee investigators, in an earlier report on sep-tember 12, detailed how $100,000 was channeled through Mexico to the Com-mittee for the Re-election of the President. These funds, part of which wound up in the Miami bank account of a Watergate bugging suspect, were from a donor or donors who wished to remain anon-ymous, authorities said.

The new study said that bank debit memorandums and copies of transfers in-volving Washington and Philadelphia banks "show that President Nixon's cam-paign received at least $30,-000 through the Banque In-ternationale at Luxembourg in late March and early April."

The Nixon committee has acknowledged receiving about $10 million in cam-paign gifts before April 7, the date a new federal elec-tion disclosure law took ef-fect. GOP officials have de-clined to disclose the names of these donors on the ground they were not yet covered by the new law.

The Patman committee did not identify the U.S. banks involved in the Lux-embourg transfers, nor did it allege that the funds were connected with the bugging attempt at Democratic Na-tional Headquarters last June 17.

"The Committee to Re-elect the President has suc-cessfully hidden the names of the donors of these addi-tional foreign checks," the report said.

"As a result, we do not know the circumstances un-der which funds reached the United States, but in light of the revelations involving the Mexcan transfers this is obviously fertile ground for investigation."

The banking committee study, in which investigators for the General Accounting Office assisted, charged that

GOP financial records were marked by "inaccuracies, omissions and improper re-cording of receipts."

In addition, the report said, "the evidence... indi-cates possible violations of Federal laws and regula-tions involving bank record-keeping."

Among "discrepancies" in the Nixon committee rec-ords or the ledgers of its banks were the following, according to the report:

- A balance of $2 million in GOP funds at one bank last April 7, "whereas the books of the reelect commit-tee showed a balance of $2.8 million."

- Depositing $250,447 "to an account of a non-existent political committee."
