Doomed Jet Crewman Said Only, 'I'm Sorr

By Joel Weisman Special to The Washington Post 2/28

CHICAGO, Feb. 27-The last words on a cockpit re- however, differed on whether corder on a United Air Lines the plane was making any plane bound from Washington noise immediately before the that crashed here Dec. 8 were: "I'm sorry," a federal investi-gator testified today.

inspector for the National about a block from the crash Transportation Safety Board, site. "It appeared as if the told of the last words, possibly plane was gliding. uttered by the co-pilot. Hearings on the crash in which 45 also lives a few hundred feet persons died opened here to-

Earlier, investigators had said final words on recording devices indicated that the crew of the Boeing 737 was acknowledging tower instructions to "left turn 180 degrees."

Investigators now speculate that the words "I'm sorry" may have been an apology for pilot revved up the engines." the crew's inability to follow from the tower of Midway air-The crash occurred port. about 11/4 miles south of the airport in a residential neigh- like we were at a stall angle. borhood in Chicago's southwest side.

Lamb also revealed for the first time that a warning de- cago Congressman George W. vice which alerts cockpit crews when an aircraft is approaching stall speeds was op-erating for at least "18 seconds" before the crash.

He said the "stick shaker," a device that vibrates the control wheel and sounds a buzzer alarm, was working before the crash. The buzzer alarm, 2 Lamb explained, cuts in when k an aircraft slows to a speed of 7 per cent more than is needed to fly.

Lamb also said that the s craft's landing gear was up | and the engines were working e properly.

Two witnesses to the crash, crash.

"It was deadly quiet," re-William L. Lamb, air safety called Louis Stalec, who lives

But Thomas J. O'Brien, who from the crash site, said he heard an incréase in engine noise before the plane turned sharply and crashed.

Corroborating his story was a surviving passenger, Martin E. Anderson of South Holland, Ill., who said, "When the plane broke through the clouds we were extremely low. But, as soon as we broke through, the

This resulted in lifting "the the instruction fully, relayed nose of the plane up a little, but the tail of the plane hit a house and everything went black," he recalled. "It seemed Anderson was one of 16 who survived the fiery crash. Among those killed were Chi-Collins, a Democrat, and Michelle Clark, a CBS correspondent. The flight had a total of 60 aboard, 55 passengers and five crew members.