The home in a Maryland suburb of Washington that Spiro T. Agnew has put up for sale

JAN 18 1974

Spiro T. Agnew, the former Vice President, has put his suburban Washington home up for sale for a figure reported to be around $300,000, which is at least $100,000 more than he paid for it a year ago.

The Georgian-style mansion, in an exclusive section of Bethesda, Md., cost Mr. Agnew $190,000 late in 1972, but the Federal Government, at the behest of the Secret Service, has installed about $125,000 in "protective equipment" in the house and grounds.

This includes a $39,500 brick and wood fence, $16,000 worth of bullet-proof glass windows and a $12,000 driveway and parking area. Most of the Government expenditures on the Agnew home were for labor and are thus irretrievable, a spokesman for the General Services Administration said.

Officials of the Australian Embassy looked over the Agnew property Wednesday, but they said yesterday they had lost interest in it.

Now that his contempt of court conviction has been reversed by the United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit, the Rev. Dr. Paul Boe says he is going to resign from his position with the American Lutheran Church and "work for justice for American Indians."

Dr. Boe, director of social services for the church, went to Sioux Falls, S. D., on Wednesday to begin serving a 14-month prison term for contempt of court, but minutes before he was to report to a United States marshal, the appeals court reversed the lower court decision. He was convicted for refusing to give a Federal grand jury information last year about the Indian occupation of Wounded Knee, S. D., which he witnessed. Dr. Boe based his right to silence on his status as a clergyman.

The 13-year-old, often acrimonious court battle between Marlon Brando and his former wife, Anna Kashfi, over custody of their son, Christian, has ended. As part of an informal agreement granting Miss Kashfi liberalized visiting rights, her lawyer asked for and was granted dismissal of a complaint in which Miss Kashfi said she had been denied visitation rights by Mr. Brando. Miss Kashfi said that with her former husband's cooperation, she had been seeing Christian in recent weeks, and that 15-year-old Christian gave her away when she was married last Saturday to James Hannaford, a Los Angeles businessman.

It simply wasn't Peter Ustinov's night at the Paris Opéra. The British actor and writer was hissed and booed after curtain fell on his production of Massenet's "Don Quixote." Most critics and the public apparently felt that his staging of the seldom performed opera was "showy" to the point of "trason." Mr. Ustinov retorted in an interview that "the only safe way not to betray Massenet is not to play him, which the French have done with great faithfulness for some time."

Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama has stopped taking the weekly acupuncture treatments he had undergone for a year while battling paralysis of his legs. His physicians in Montgomery declined to speculate on whether the treatments had benefited his health. The acupuncture treatments by Dr. Ling Sun Chu of New York were begun several months after Mr. Wallace was paralyzed from the waist down after being shot in May, 1972.

Gov. Meldrim Thomson Jr. of New Hampshire has lost a major round in his continuing fight against what he considers "permissiveness," and he calls the defeat a "tragedy." Federal Judge Hugh Bownes has ruled that homosexual student groups at the University of New Hampshire may hold social gatherings on campus like any other student clubs, under first and 14th Amendment protection.

The Gay Students Organization at New Hampshire had brought suit against university officials after the organization's recognition as a legitimate campus club was rescinded. University officials had acted after Mr. Thomson threatened to veto state funds for the university unless homosexuals were removed from campus. Governor Thomson said of the Federal court decision: "Judge Bownes has enforced sexual perversion on the university campus, which in itself is horrible."

Admitting that he had been carried away by the fact that both he and Gov. John J. Gilligan are Irish Roman Catholics, the Rev. Colby Grimes, chaplain of the Ohio House of Representatives, apologized for having closed a prayer on the House floor by apostrophizing the heavens to grant Mr. Gilligan the Presidency.

"Irish Catholic priests become enthusiastic about politicians," said Father Grimes, after some Republicans angrily walked off the House floor rather than hear his pro-Gilligan prayer. He asked forgiveness by reading Psalm 51, in which David prays: "Hide thy face from my sins, and blot out all mine inequities." ALBIN KREBS
