Why Not . . .

Why not fill that U-Haul trailer with Mr. Nixon's donated vice presidential papers, back it up to the White House, and trade them for the papers and tapes Messrs. Rodino and Jaworsky need? Indeed, if Mr. St. Clair claimed the subpoenas were backdated, perhaps he could negotiate income averaging in exchange for the missing 18½ minutes. This is known as an executive privilege, and has been done by every president since Alexander Hamilton, author of the formerly $20 bill. Implications to the contrary are an insidious European plot.

Sure, he could go back to his world famous yo-yo, piano, and Uher 500 act. But that would be the easy way. 1040 or fight! Write off his back!
