A Counselor To Nixon Leaves His Job

Key Biscayne, Fla.

Bryce N. Harlow was officially off the job yesterday as White House counselor.

He began working at the White House at the start of President Nixon's first term in January, 1969 and left in June, 1970. He returned last last June to help Mr. Nixon through Watergate and related problems.

Harlow departed without fanfare to return to Procter and Gamble Manufacturing Co. as vice president.
