WXPost

ign Unit Charges

By William Claiborne Washington Post Staff Writer

rne Fair Campaign Practices Committee has filed an appeal with the Internal Revenue Service seeking the release of documents that it claims will prove that the proposed revocation of the committee's tax exempt status was based the committee include a dit and subsequent proposed on political pressure from the White House.

Refusal by the IRS to release the documents so far, acsponding to White House pres-chibald said in a letter to IRS In 1971 the committee dis whose $40,000 annual budget organization which is trying to der. prevent dirty politics."

Archibald said that if the committee does not receive congressional, the documents, it will sue the and presidential elections and IRS under the Freedom of In- investigates charges of unfair formation Act.

"sensitive case report" which, revocation of its tax-exempt Archibald said, the IRS has admitted is on file.

"Public access to the sensicording to committee director tive case report . . . will show The IRS indicated its intensamuel J. Archibald, demon-whether the IRS denial of postrates that the IRS "was re-litical pressures is valid," Ar- pending appeals.

The non-partisan committee -which routinely monitors campaign tactics-complained The documents sought by last November that an IRS austatus might have been retribution for committee disclosures of Republican tactics.

sures to attack a tax-exempt | Commissioner Donald Alexan-| closed that Republicans had financed a series of 11th-hour campaign newspaper advertisements denouncing eight gubernatorial Democratic senatorial candi-"extremists" dates as "radicals."

Sources said then that the ads were prepared by a secret campaign committee operating under the aegis of the White House-

Charles P. Taft, chairman of the Fair Campaign Practices Committee, said the tax ruling has jeopardized the existence of the 19-year-old committee,

House Pressure in Tax Case

butions and foundation grants. that:

Archibald observed that IRS manuals instruct tax agents to prepare sensitive case reports in all cases which, "if they become known, would be of con-yond technical questions to Haldeman suggesting that the siderable public interest, resulting in inquiries or criticism directed at the national (IRS) office, particularly by the mass media or members of Congress."

Another IRS manual supplement obtained by The Washington Post from another opment" in the case. source advises tax agents pre-

"It is important they (top IRS officials) know in advance about actions in cases which may create problems. The potential problem areas go berelations matters."

The committee also is seeking access to an IRS chronology of its tax case, which Archibald said includes details of the initiation of the audit and evidence of any "urgent devel-

Senate Watergate committee date's opponent. uncovered a memo from former White House counsel John W. Dean III to presidential chief of staff H. R. (Bob) procedural, policy and public IRS be made more politically free status. responsive, including convincon certain tax-exempt organizations.

garded the committee's re-dit in accordance with our lease of information about a normal procedure for examincandidate's campaign prac-ing all tax-exempt organiza-Archibald observed in his tices to be, in effect, a state-tions."

is supported by private contri-paring sensitive case files letter to Alexander that the ment in behalf of the candi-

Therefore, the IRS ruled. "such activity brings (the committee) within the definition of an 'action' organization," resulting in loss of tax-

In response to Archibald's ing the service to crack down letter, an IRS spokesman said yesterday, "There is no truth to such an allegation. The The IRS has said that it re- committee was selected for au-