Destroyed Audit List Treasury.

By Jack Anderson

President Nixon's top aide, H. R. Haldeman, ordered tax audits on a dozen White House targets, but the Treasury official assigned the hatchet job ripped up the list in revulsion.

In passing on the order for the audits, which would have vio-lated Internal Revenue Service rules, Haldeman stated or im-plied he was acting on Presi-dent Nixon's personal orders, according to then White House aide Clark Mollenhoff.

"Either Haldeman told me the President wanted (the audits) done or that was the implica-tion," said Mollenhoff a Prosaid Mollenhoff, a Pulitzer prize-winning reporter. "I was just the conduit," he said.

As Mollenhoff remembers it Haldeman called him in March or April, 1970 and informed him he would be getting a list of names on which a "routine examination...or audit" was to be done.

Shortly thereafter, either Haldeman himself or the late Murray Chotiner also a White handed it to Pollner. In it were a request to perform that he had been given "a list of people with handed it to Pollner. In it were House aide, delivered the list of about a dozen names typed on a request to peform tax audits figure, about a dozen names. Mollen-paper with no letterhead about a dozen names. Mollen-paper with no letterhead. hoff had made a few tax inquiries at IRS before, but he told us that "this time, it was one of those things when there was something different."

Nevertheless, he forwarded the names to IRS Commissioner Randolph Thrower with a request that they be examined. Thrower told us that if the list had been backed up with specific data, he would have sent it threw it away," as best he re- House "enemies." to the field as he is required to calls in a trash can near the balked.

But, he said, "I certainly did not want to do it," with only a list of handpicked targets. In ner at least twice to remind him milder, but final words, he told Mollenhoff he wouldn't go fended Chatiner off by saving through with the deal, and backed it up with a memo.
Far from slacking off, the White House tried a second approach. This time, Chotiner was the "conduit" to Treasury. Ironically, his own income taxes had been relentlessly audited during the two previous Demo-cratic administrations.

But Chotiner summoned the Treasury Department's highly Both Mollenhoff and Thrower respected law enforcement di-have given their stories to rector, Martin Pollner, to the Watergate investigators, White House.

to speak to me," recalled Poll-was never mentioned," he ner, now a New York lawyer. sighed.
"He told me, "if it's possible as a public service (since) anyone the watergate sleuths last December a few weeks before he ple I suggest'."

Without further ado, Chotiner produced

"I felt it was an improper ap proach," Pollner said, explaining his distress. Yet, he was also aware of the dangers of refusing White House orders.

Badly shaken, he left Chotiner to return to his own office just across the street. But once outside of Chotiner's sight, his reWhite House.

Still, the White House was de termined. Chotiner called Pollfended Chotiner off by saying, "I've got a couple of other things I'm doing.'

While neither Mollenhoff nor Pollner say they can remember the names, Thrower, reached by my associate Les Whitten in Atlanta, said he recollects they were definitely not names of administration figures simply being checked out.

hite House.

Pollner told us they have never contacted him. "I'd as soon it cember, a few weeks before he was killed in an auto accident. He confided to them that he had said he passed on "this list of ten or twelve names (to) Mollenhoff and to Martin Pollner."

Footnote: Haldeman could not be reached, and the White House has denied the President side of Chothner's Sight, has to counsel John Dean attempted to solve hardened. He took out the get then IRS Commissioner list and "I ripped it up and Johnnie Walters to audit White counsel John Dean attempted to own man," Kinglsey said.

He, too,

balked.
POWER PLAY—At time when the power industry is most in need of strong regulation, President Nixon has named a minor Watergate figure as one of its federal regulators.

He is Dan Kingsley, a former White House personnel chief still on the White House staff. He was nominated to replace Federal Power Commissioner Albert Brooke.

The Senate Commerce Committee, when it looks into the nomination, is certain to question Kingsley about his role in the notorious "Responsiveness" program set up by political plotters John Mitchell, H. R. Haldeman and Fred Malek. "Responsiveness" was a fancy name for using the entire ma he chinery of government, including grants and patronage, to drum up political support for President Nixon. The Special Prosecutor's office is now investigating it.

Confidential memos reveal that-Kingsley, while not a key cooperated willingly with the scheme. Two of his staffers were busy henchmen for 'Responsiveness", and Kingsley carried out several projects for Mitchell-Haldeman-Malek troika.

In an agonized talk with us, personally tried to misuse the Kingsley said he had done no IRS. However in a previously remore than any presidential subported incident, White House ordinate would do. "I am my

©1974, United Feature Syndicate