AUG 1 4 1974 ixon Crime Imi Is Debated by

By Jack Fuller

Special to The Washington Post

HONOLULU, Aug. 13-The American Bar Association began debating today whether the criminal law should apply to Richard M Nixon for his part in the Watergate scandals.

troduced resolutions on the question. Both speak circumspectly, urging only only that the decision whether to prosecute be made on the same basis it would for any other person.

Yet the resolutions are expected to meet with loud opposition when they are taken before the full association.
One resolution, introduced by San Francisco lawyer Gilbert T. Graham, specifically mentions the former President. "It is unfair and unequal treatment for other Watergate defendants to be convicted, sentenced and disbarred for actions and conduct appearently condoned and participated in by the President of introduced by Thomas M. Ferthe United States if the latter rill Jr., of Blue Bell, Pa.

After some technical After some technical made by the commitconsderations other than that he has held the office of President."

The association's Resolutions Committee voted to op-pose Graham's proposal when it makes its report to the assembly, the meeting of all 5,-Two ABA members have in- 000 lawyers attending the anbearing nual convention here.

> Some members of the committee said they were worried that specific references to President Nixon might have a prejudicial effect on any case that is brought against him.

"I would hate to defend a man whom the ABA demanded be prosecuted," said commit-tee member Sidney S. Sachs, of Washington, D.C. Sachs was one of the attorneys for convicted Watergate figure E. Howard Hunt Jr.

Other committee members wanted to avoid having the association appear to give advice to Jaworski, but the commitport a more general resolution actions and conduct," Graham's resolution states.

It calls on Watergate Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski to base his decision whether

After some technical changes made by the committee, the resolution states that the association "continues its dedication to the principle of fair, just, and impartial applito prosecute Mr. Nixon "on cation and enforcement of the law, without fear or favor arising from the position or status of the person or persons alleged to have violated the law."

Though committee chairman William Reece Smith Jr., of Tampa, said the Ferrill resolution "is so obvious that I don't know whether anybody could disagree with it," there was no doubt at the committee's meeting that it was going to be a controversial proposal.

As one committee member put it, "Even though it seems very general, in the context of blanket immunity" for Mr.

"Nixon.
"I think we should slow the process down," Smith said,
"give it 30 to 60 days, allow the special prosecutor to assemble the facts and make his judgment."

Smith said he believed the association should act cautiously, if at all, on the issue, "perhaps setting up guidelines and standards that might aid the public and authorities in making a determination" and standards that might are sessions continue to raise agonizing questions observed by the smaller House association for the public and authorities in raise agonizing questions observed by the smaller House association should be smaller House association should act cautions and the smaller House association should act cautions and standards that might are smaller House association should act cautions and standards that might are smaller House association should act cautions and standards that might are smaller House association should act cautions and standards that might are smaller House association should act cautions and standards that might are smaller House association should act cautions and standards that might are smaller House association should be actionable and authorities in might be actionable and authorities in the smaller House association should be actionable and the smaller House association should be actionable as a smaller House association should be actionable as a smaller House as a smaller H Smith said he believed the the public and authorities in raise making a determination."

CHESTERFIELD SMITH opposes blanket immunity concern that the decision on prosecution should be made slowly and carefully. In an interview here today Cox said, "I can think of arguments on both sides whether to prosecute Nixon. My strongest feeling is to let it simmer for On Monday the outspoken ABA president, Chesterfield Smith, said at a press conference that he opposes keep himself in the public eye. That could have a bearing on the decision."

Even if the association's assembly votes in favor of one of the resolutions, the proposal would not become offiial ABA policy until it is ap-making a determination." about legal ethics and discip-Archibald Cox, former spe-cial prosecutor, shared Smith's calls "a lawyer's scandal."