

Editor — We who have supported Richard M. Nixon steadfastly since his campaign against the leftist Helen Gahagan Douglas for a congressional seat will not be fooled by the vicious plot by the leftist press that eventually led to his resignation from office. We know full well the insidious Red power that dogged his footsteps ever since he sent the traitor Alger Hiss to jail.

It is ironic that the very people he served so well would so willingly be duped by the so-called liberal press. It should be obvious to everyone with a mind to reason that the events surrounding Watergate were necessary to guarantee the preservation of democracy for us and our children. What people do not seem to realize is that a political campaign is not a garden party in these times, but a desperate life and death struggle against the Red menace.

We who realize this owe a debt of gratitude to those fallen heroes — Nixon, Haldeman, Ehrlichman, Mitchell, Agnew and many more who sacrificed so much to insure that our glorious American flag will never be replaced by the emblem of repressive communism: the hammer and sickle.

JOSEPH HAYNES,

San Francisco.