

David Eisenhower Is Thinking Politics

Downingtown, Pa.

David Eisenhower says he's been considering running for public office but hasn't made any definite plans.

Eisenhower, grandson of former President Eisenhower and son-in-law of former President Nixon, said Tuesday the idea of running for office "has been in the back of my mind."

He said he has "stayed in touch" with state politics but is not yet ready to seek office.

Eisenhower and his wife, the former Julie Nixon, have a home in Gettysburg, Pa. but recently moved to Capistrano Beach, Calif., near former President Nixon's San Clemente retreat. Eisenhower is working on a biography of Nixon that he said would be titled "Going Home to Glory."
