

9 Sept. 1973

HW:

There may be nothing whatever in this that is new to you, but I thought it comprehensive enough to make it worth copying for you on the chance that it at least represents a fairly recent look at the situation. What struck me was the way Mr. ~~XXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXX~~ Suarez seems to be EVERYBODY's lawyer.

This appeared in the first issue of Norman Cousins' revived Saturday Review-World. Sutton, as you no doubt know, was travel editor for the old SR for many years before it was Shanghaied by a couple of Madison Avenue types who moved it to SF, broke it up into four shallow and adolescent monthlies and ran the whole business into bankruptcy.

jdw