A Capitol Encore for Viet Demonstrators

Washington

Some peace activists from the Vietnam war were reunited in the chill on Capitol Hill yesterday to protest U.S. involvement with the Angolan conflict.

"Welcome back, everyone," shouted Cora Weiss, one of the veteran demonstrators, at the rally outside the Capitol.

The new Philippine consul general, Romeo Abelardo Arguelles, assumed his new post here yesterday, the Philippine consulate general reported.

Arguelles, 41, was first secretary of the Philippine embassy in Washington before his assignment in San Francisco. He served previously as commercial attache at the Philippine embassies in Washington and Tokyo.

Then, in a speech directed at the administration, she said: "The people who brought you peace in Vietnam will prevent you from bringing war in Angola."

About 200 persons gathered in sunny but subfreezing weather and they responded enthusiastically to her speech and remarks by Representative Bella Abzug (Dem. N.Y.), activist David Dellinger and others. All the speakers drew a parallel between U.S. support for anti-Communist factions in Angola and the early American involvement in Vietnam.

As the demonstrators rallied, technicians nearby unloaded equipment for televising President Ford's State of the Union address to the reconvened Congress.

In his Speech; Dellinger said the movement against U.S. aid to Angola is bigger and better organized than were the early protests concerning Vietnam.

"This is a warning," he said.

Kissinger, said Dellinger, "used to tell us we had to stop the Soviet Union in Vietnam so we wouldn't have to fight them in the streets of San Francisco. Now he's saying we have to stop them in Angola so we won't have to fight them in Israel. We have to say no to this."

Abzug, interrupted a dozen times by applause and cheers, called for an end to all outside involvement in Angola, and specifically that of the Soviet Union, Cuba and South Africa.

All the speakers urged support for an amendment by Senator John V. Tunney (Dem.-Calif.) that would bar use of any American funds for support of any Angolan faction.
