

Betty Beale: Washington

David Eisenhower and Julie were among the notables at the smashing wedding brunch given for Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kans., and Federal Trade Commissioner Elizabeth Hanford by her brother John and his wife and Assistant Secretary of Defense and Mrs. Robert Ellsworth. Bob Ellsworth's good friend, new Secretary of Defense Don Rumsfeld was there and it was whispered around that Bob will soon be deputy secretary.

David, who was being congratulated on his Wall Street Journal article entitled "White House Killers," said he doesn't think he wants to be a lawyer after all. He likes journalism too well. His piece was about Sen. Frank Church's investigating committee report that prominently linked President Eisenhower with the assassination plot of Lumumba on the basis of one person's unsubstantiated conversation while obviously playing down the numerous conversations President Kennedy had relating to the possible assassination of Castro. The committee knew Lumumba was killed by his own people in a plot unrelated to the CIA, wrote David.

Virginia Knauer, the President's assistant on consumer affairs and bride Hanford's former boss, recalled that when introducing Elizabeth to a industry audience, it broke them up when never had any complaints about "That's government
