HE NEW YORK TIMES, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 12, 1968

MOVED: Capt. William L. McGonagle, the former commander of U.S. intelligence ship Liberty, wiping away tears during Medal of Honor ceremonies in Washington yesterday. He received award for saving ship and lives of many of his men during surprise attack in Mediterranean.

See also CIA 6 May 65, on awarding of medal to Francis Gary Powers.

WASHINGTON, June (UPI) — The Navy presented the Medal of Honor today to the skipper of the U.S.S. Liberty, which was nearly destroyed by Israeli warplanes and torpedo boats in the Mediterranean Sea last year.

The nation's highest award for valor went to Capt. William L. McGonagle, 43 years old, of Cohasset, Mass., who was cited for keeping the heavily damaged communications ship under control for 17 hours despite his own serious wounds.

The citation said that Captain McGonagle had displayed "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty."

At times, it said, he commanded his ship while lying on the deck to keep from fainting, sometimes directing the vessel by watching her wake. The Secretary of the Navy

The Secretary of the Navy Paul R. Ignatius, who pre-sented the medal, said that Captain McGonagle "was re-sponsible for saving the lives of many of his crew and for saving the ship." Thirty-four Americans died when the ship was attacked last June 8-9 at the time of the Arab-Israeli War. Israel later apologized and said it was a case of mistaken idenwas a case of mistaken iden-

was a case of mistaken iden-tity. Draw of the citation, signed by President Johnson, said that Captain McGonagle had re-fused to relinquish command of the Liberty until a later rendezvous with an American destruyor and hed then redestroyer and had then re-fused medical aid until con-vinced that other seriously wounded members of hiswounded members of crew had been cared for.