Poet Pablo Neruda Buried as Troops Guard Cemetery

. Reuter

SANTIAGO, Sept. 25, —Chilean poet and Nobel Prize-winner Pablo Neruda was buried here today to the strains of the Communist "Internationale," as troops guarded the competent Allende "burst out.

The military junta praised foreign diplomats, Chilean lit-erary figures, several former normal. erary figures, several former Communists militants and dozens of workers, attended the funeral.

Neruda, who died on Satur-day night at the age of 69, was a lifelong Communist.

The poet died only 11 days after his friend, President Sal-vador Allende died during the military coup which overthrew joined the end of the column. his leftist government two weeks ago.

Neruda suffered a heart atcancer of the prostate.

Troops were called in as the funeral cortege moved slowly terspersed with broken glass

The military junta praised Neruda at his death, but denied as troops guarded the cemetery. Neruda at his death, but denied him a state funeral because the Neruda, widely regarded as Latin America's greatest poet, won the nobel Prize in 1971.

As the cortege approached the cemetery, the whispered refrain of the "Internationale" was heard. Soon the crowd was army jeeps carrying 14 men joined the end of the column.

The coffin, draped in a Chilean flag, was carried from Neruda's study in the house in tack in a Santiago clinic after a Santiago suburb where he struggling for months against began his literary career 52 years ago.

funeral cortege moved slowly through the hushed streets of the capital—still under virtual martial law—chanting Communist slogans.

As the procession entered the cemetery gates, shouts of lay dying in a hospital.