

President's First News Conference

Washington

President Ford is expected to hold his first presidential news conference next week, White House officials indicated yesterday.

Mr. Ford told the White House press corps, shortly after his inauguration, that he intends as President to follow his practice as vice president and during 25 years as a representative of holding frequent news conferences.

Former President Nixon held three news conferences this year — his last on March 6.

United Press.