

SF Examiner

President Ford's look-alike

OCT 27 1974

An Oklahoma police chief reported last week that he had seen President Ford with a gun in his hand. The man he saw, it was clarified yesterday, was Richard Keiser (left), the Secret Service agent in charge of the White House detail. The look-alike bodyguard admits he's often mistaken for the President, especially by those who never have seen Ford in person. But a White House spokesman explained there is a sure way to tell them apart: 'Keiser rarely smiles. Keiser never waves both arms at crowds.'

