

New Rocky

Loan List--

$500,000

New York

Nelson A. Rockefeller reported yesterday — in a second list of loans — that he has loaned $507,656 to his family, friends and close associates over the past 17 years.

They still owe him $147,733, the multimillionaire disclosed, including $12,500 due from his wife, Happy, on a $15,000 loan he made her Oct. 1, 1973.

Mrs. Rockefeller has her own income from a trust set up at the time of her marriage to the former governor. It is reported to total $39 million.

The new list was sent to the congressional committees that will hold confirmation hearings.

Covering letters to Chairman Howard W. Cannon (Dem-Nev.) of the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration and Chairman Peter W. Rodino, Jr. (Dem-N.J.) of the House Committee on the Judiciary said the new list supplemented but did not duplicate the earlier one.

Hugh Morrow, Rockefeller's spokesman, said he doubts the new list is very newsworthy.

"There's nothing controversial in it," he said. "You got that with the first one."

The first list Morrow referred to was a list detailing loans and gifts of $1.78 million to public officials who worked for him. It showed, among other sums, $625,000 to Dr. William Ronan, now chairman of the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, and $50,000 to Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Rockefeller, who spent a quiet weekend at his Pocantico Hills estate with his wife, was unavailable for comment.

The largest loan on the new list was $84,000 to Robert B. Anderson, made in two installments in 1957 before Anderson became secretary of the treasury.

The smallest was $2500 to John J. Gilhooley made in 1961 before he became a commissioner of the New York City Transit System. Both loans have been repaid in full.

The former governor's son Rodman still owes $20,250 on a $27,000 loan made Dec. 11, 1968 and son Steven owes $9450 of $12,600 borrowed April 8, 1971.

The largest outstanding sum is $76,250 owed by a group of employees in the Rockefeller family offices who borrowed $101,250 during the past five years to buy interests in an investment partnership.

Richard S. Aldrich, Rockefeller's cousin and close friend, owes $10,000 of $26,000 borrowed in 1963; Joan Braden, wife of newspaper columnist Thomas Braden, owes $4283 of $10,283 borrowed last New Year's Eve, and Albert L. Hadley, not further identified, owes $15,000 borrowed Dec. 11, 1972.

All the rest of the money has been paid back, including $12,000 lent to Rockefeller's uncle Winthrop W. Aldrich, a former chairman of the Chase, now Chase Manhattan Bank, when he left London in 1957 after four years as U.S. ambassador to Britain.

Other loans, with some of the recipients identified only by name, were:

Louise A. Boyer, $6000; George A. Dudley, chief executive officer of the New York State Council on Architecture, $6000; Leonard Glenn, $3900 written off; Vera Goeller, $15,000; Walter Gordon, $4075; Wallace K. Harrison, architect for Rockefeller Center and the United Nations building, $60,000.

Eugene Holman Jr., $21,212; Francis A. Jamieson, an old friend now dead, $12,000; Frederick S. Johnson, $6000; Richard H. Mansfield, $6000; Robert C. Orf, $3500; Ann R. Pierson, Rockefeller's daughter, $12,500; W. Kenneth Riland, personal physician, $6000.

Anna M. Rosenberg, widow of Marshall Plan chief Paul Hoffmann, $6000; Theodore C. Streibert, a family employee once director of the U.S. Information Agency, $6000; Ruth Tillinghast, $6000; employees of the Constitutional Commission, $10,586; Carl E. Siegesmund, a family business employee, $11,250.
